Contractors Board Member Margaret Cavin
Receives Nevada Chapter Associated General Contractors
Subcontractor of the Year Award

Margaret Cavin, co-owner of J & J Mechanical Inc. of Sparks (a C-1 plumbing, heating and air conditioning company) and Vice Chair of the Nevada State Contractors Board, was honored with the Nevada Chapter Associated General Contractors' "Subcontractor of the Year" award at its annual meeting in Reno on Feb. 23, 2006. AGC general contractors and suppliers voted to select Cavin's company, which is co-owned with Jerry Bastasini, for the prestigious award.

"It's a vote that means something because it is from your peers," Cavin said, adding that this is the second time J & J Mechanical has won Subcontractor of the Year. "I think we received it because we always performed very well in this marketplace."

J & J Mechanical Inc. has been a Nevada licensed contractor since April 1982. It handles large-scale projects for schools and public buildings, having recently completed work on the Reno-Sparks Convention Center.

The AGC promotes safety on construction job sites, represents the industry before state and local legislative bodies and supports the competitive bidding system to assure that the public receives maximum value for each tax dollar spent for construction. The organization encourages its members to become involved in both civic and local affairs.
